KOWLOON

PERSONS of an enquiring turn of mind have of late been asking whether any and if any what, amount of protection is supposed to be afforded to Europeans by the presence of a police force at Kowloon.

loong. Rumour, we all know, is a unreliable jade but she sometimes speaks the truth; and in the present instance she avers that the plums in a workhouse pudding, to use a somewhat vulgar simile, may be deemed plentiful in comparison with the visits paid by the police to the locality adjoining the Union Dock Company's premises. Evidence on such a point is naturally negative on the part of those who complain; and much positive proof may doubtless be adduced that at certain periods known to the inspectors, police not only should and ought but actually did, visit the locality in question during and between certain hours. The only answer, of course, is "We didn't see them," and this is true like the others.

no formal representation has been made to the Police authorities, and no harm can follow from the attention of the Superior recent murder of Yancey certainly shows that the police are not abroad at all hours, or at least in the neighbourhood of the houses which most require protection.

tion; and as we understand the police rates are levied on the lots in Kowloon, the owners are fairly entitled to the protection for which those sums are paid. It would seem of the highest importance to the interests of British Kowloon that particular attention paid to rendering it thoroughly secure regards life and property. We do not mean, because one murder has been committed, to argue a general insecurity, but it certainly increases a public feeling in that direction. It is undoubtedly true that many would be glad to make Kowloon a temporary residence at times, were not a feeling of being cut off from help case of attack, very prevalent. The pro
